CHITA---TOKIO CONFERENCE NEAR BREAK UP DUE TO SOVIET

Japanese Delegates Wire Home For Instructions

RUSS TOO STRONG

Terms Advanced Not Acceptable To Nipponese

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, Sept. 12.—As to the question whether the Changchun conference should be continued, the Japanese delegates have found it necessary to ask the Tokio Government for instructions and have proposed to postpone the conference pending the arrival of these instructions. As a consequence, today's sitting was adjourned.

With regard to the nature and scope of the Concerence, there is a difference of opinion between the Japanese and Russian delegates. Despite the fact that the Russian delegates are apparently assuming a very strong attitude it is generally observed that such a stand on their part is by no means a final one judging from Russia's past diplomatic tactics. Should Russia insist upon her own views to the end there would be no alternative for the negotiations but to fail.

If the conference should come to such a pass, both Japan and Russia will not find an opportunity for the present to conduct another negotiations, which would be a great misfortune to both countries. While nothing can be prophesied about the conference it is not likely that it will be brought to a rupture at this juncture. The public takes the view that by mutual concessions on both sides a compromise to a certain extent will be found so that the negotiations may be carried on smoothly.

RAIN AND WIND FOLLOW IN WAKE OF TWO TYPHOONS

Storm Located East Of Island Of Luzon Is Twenty-Second Recorded Since May

Indications last night were that Shanghai is to experience nothing worse than rainfall and gusty weather from the typhoon that swept inland near Wenchow and from another traveling in the wake of the first. Location of the latest storm 200 miles east of the Island of Luzon brings the total number of typhoons that have developed in the China, Eastern and Yellow Seas to twenty-two since last May.

The typhoon that brought rain and squally weather to Shanghai yesterday expended some little force near Wenchow and after passing inland recurved in a general northerly direction sweeping yesterday afternoon in the direction of Chinkiang. The effects of this storm were felt from Formosa to the Yangtsze Valley with heavy rains falling in many centers.

In notices issued yesterday by the Weather Observatory the typhoon following the first was located in latitude 28 North and Longitude 120 East. Squalls and heavy rainfall were predicted for the Shanghai district as a consequence of the movement of this storm.

The United States cutter Mojave, with Assistant U. S. Secretary of Commerce Huston and party aboard, has been delayed at Fusan by the typhoon in the North, according to word received by the American Commercial Attache and probably will not reach Shanghai before the end of the week.

It had been expected that Secretary Huston and his accompanying party of commercial and scientific experts might reach this port Sunday. Preparations for the reception and entertainment of the delegation, which is touring the Orient in the interests of American trade relations, are being made by Chinese and American commercial organisations here.

LIGHTNER AGAIN BEHIND BARS IN PORTLAND PRISON

Oregon Fugitive Who Escaped From American Jail Here Soon To Be Tried

With their setting shifted back across the Pacific to America new episodes are being played out in the dramatic career of the so-called 'King of the Pacific Narcotic Ring,' David Lightner, who flashed into prominence as a leading character of current news events through the period of a brief stay here in Shanghai when he was arrested by United States Marshal Thurston Porter and then made a sensational escape from the American jail.

Newspapers from Portland, Oregon, which is the scene of the major portion of Lightner's alleged criminal activities, bring the word that he is again behind the bars there. So it now develops that when Lightner and Ralph S. Boyd cut their way through the ceiling of the American jail and clambered over the high roof of the building to a window through which they were able to descend to freedom Lightner, who subsequently eluded all pursuit in China, only was following a tortuous course leading back to the Oregon prison whence he had fled to China.

The reports of Portland newspapers tell of Lightner's return in custody and disclose interesting details of his movements after he had succeeded in fleeing China, particularly his recapture on the steamer West Faralon on which he succeeded in secreting himself just before it sailed for San Diego, California from Shanghai.

Lightner escaped from the American jail in company with Boyd and was at liberty for ten days while police all over China searched for him. Boyd was recaptured a few hours after the escape on the yacht Elka on the Pootung side and has since been sentenced to five months in Bilibid Prison, Manila, for jail-breaking by Judge Charles S. Lobingier.

RECOGNISED BY CONSUL

In some manner Lightner managed to hide away on the West Faralon, bound for San Pedro from Shanghai, and was discovered at sea by the First Mate. Lightner was hiding under some stored materials in the steering gear room. The captain ordered him put to work but Lightner refused and showed fight when force was attempted.

Mr. Paul L. Gross, American Vice-Consul at Shanghai, who was returning to the United States on leave on the West Faralon saw the fight and recognised Lightner from the description of him that had been broadcast at the time of the escape. Gross conferred with the captain and a message was sent by radio to Shanghai asking for details of description. When United States Marshal Thurston E. Porter radioed back to the vessel Lightner was put in irons in a hastily constructed cell in the officers wardroom.

Lightner, whose past record shows him to be a desperate character, made several attacks on the ship's officers every time they went near his cell to take him food and water, and finally to break his spirit he was put on bread and water for six days. After that he promised good behavior and was allowed to exercise on the deck under guard once a day.

FOUGHT EXTRADICTION

Upon arrival at San Pedro Lightner claimed Canadian citizenship and asserted he would fight being returned to Portland. Federal Narcotic Agent W. R.

Vet Greets Girl Who Saved His Life

Fred B. Peters and Miss Hazel W. Watson.

WHEN Fred B. Peters, of the famous Ninety-first Division, was near death in a base hospital in Savenay, after falling wounded in the Argonne Forest, the doctor sent for pretty Miss Hazel W. Watson to write a letter to the boy's mother in San Francisco that he was going to die. Miss Watson recognised the wounded lad as a neighbor, and, instead of writing that letter, she stuck by him with tender nursing for six months. When the war was over the girl did relief work in Europe. Upon returning home she found her patient, now wearing a wooden leg, at the San Francisco ferry building to greet her.

Further Hearing Held In Star Ricsha Co. Suit

The four sub-foremen of the Star Ricsha Company who are being charged by Mr. A. Cohen with intimidating workers of the company were again before the Mixed Court yesterday when testimony as to their alleged activities toward fomenting a strike was given by other employes.

The case, which has already occupied considerable time, was again adjourned by Assessor Vizenzinovich and Magistrate Tsang and there will probably be several more lengthy sessions before it is finished.

At the hearing yesterday Mr. H. D. Rodger, appearing for the complainant, called Tsa Kung-san, head foreman of the Star Company, to the witness box. The witness stated that on July 24 he was told by Cohen that the accused were making trouble and he was instructed to obtain the addresses of the troublemakers and obtain information so that warrants could be applied for. He attended meetings held by the sub-foremen on July 24, 25 and 27, when from 20 to 50 were present and the accused made speeches. It was declared at the meetings that in view of the high charges being made for damages to ricshas the sub-foremen should refuse to take out licenses from Cohen. The witness said it was planned at the meetings to get subscriptions of 30 cents each from the coolies and Tsa said he learned that collections were made from 2,500 to 2,600 out of a total of 3,000 coolies. The fund was to be used to engage counsel.

STATEMENTS CONFLICT

Cross-examined by Mr. James Browne, who appears for the defendants, the witness said that he was next in authority to Cohen and if any sub-foremen desired to hire ricshas he took the applicant to Cohen, who then settled the arraugements. He had been with the company four or five years and during that time there were no increases in the charges for damages to ricshas. He did not know if the damage were all paid by the coolies.

The witness denied that Cohen at any time held up the licenses.

Cohen at the last hearing himself testified that he had held up the licenses, fearing a strike.

Regarding the detention some days ago of 146 ricshas of the company by the police, the witness said the licenses were suspended for two days because the vehicles were out without rain aprons. This, witness said, was the fault of the coolies, who had not taken the aprons. The foremen had to pay for the ricshas' hire. He did not know if the sub-foremen were required to stand the loss, the foremen collecting from them. He was "afraid" the sub-foremen had not paid. Cohen, the witness stated, received the money regardless of who hired the vehicles. But if it were raining heavily and a foreman reported that say only 130 out of 200 ricshas had been taken out Cohen would not charge for the seventy. So far as Cohen was concerned the coolies could quit if they liked, this being the sub-foremen's business.

TELLS OF PROMISE

Another Chinese employe of the company, Wong Sing-wai, testified that he acted as interpreter when Cohen called a meeting of the foremen and promised a reduction in the amounts paid for damages to ricshas. Everything was to be reduced, he said, and the foremen went away satisfied. The foremen had reported that there were four or five troublemakers and had given the names of the four accused.

The witness denied that $6,000 a month was collected by the company for repairing damages. When a ricsha was sent to the factory, he said, it was thoroughly overhauled and disinfected and the covers were washed. Regarding the assessment of damages, he said that if a coolie collided with a tramcar, for instance, and broke a shaft, he was required to pay for a new one. "If he got a tire damaged by being run over by a tramcar" he was required to replace it with a new one. In case of damage to tires through improper inflation the coolie must make it good. No charge was made, however, for the use of the company's machinery in the making of repairs and the coolies were not assessed for the factory workmen's wages.

ATTORNEYS CLASH IN CASE AGAINST VOLUNTEER FLEET

Plaintiffs Ordered To Appear In Mixed Court Today

The case in which the crews of the Russian Volunteer Fleet ships Erivan and Astrakhan are suing for wages alleged due them, was up again in the Mixed Court before Assessor Ivanoff and Magistrate Tsang and after bickerings between attorneys was set over for hearing today.

Mr. Leonard Hartigan, for the complainants, urged that the case be proceeded with, though his clients were not in court. He stated that he was in possession of all the documents necessary. Dr. O. Fischer, for the defense, opposed the hearing and declared that the matter had been practically settled out of court and that it was only opposing counsel who wished to go on with the suit.

The court ruled that there should be a special hearing this morning and that if plaintiffs do not appear at that time the action will be dismissed.

ALLIED UNITY NOW ASSURED IN NEAR EAST DEVELOPMENTS

French And Italians To Co-operate With British.

TO WARN TURKEY

Existence Of Neutral Zone To Be Called To Their Notice

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 12.—Any doubt regarding the solidarity of the Allies in the Near East to face the suddenly developed crisis was effectively disposed of by an announcement today that the French and Italian troops will co-operate in the task, up to the present undertaken by British and Turkish Gendarmerie and officered by British, of holding the neutral zone of the Ismid Peninsular and the Asiatic shore of the Dardenelles.

This decision was reached at a meeting of the Allied High Commissioners and Generals at Constantinople, when it was also decided to remind the Angora Government of the existence of the neutral zone, entry into which, on the European side, the Allies promptly forbade the Greeks a few weeks ago. Allied flags have been raised over the neutral zone on both sides of the Straits to warn the Kemalists that violation will be considered an act of defiance and hostility to the Allies collectively.

The official French decision to range up alongside Britain is marked with a revulsion of opinion in the French press, which yesterday was pleased at the Kemalist successes as being a blow to the British policy.

The Temps and Journal des Debats, which did not indulge in their contemporaries somewhat noisy joy, emphasise the necessity for France of maintaining the Straits. They say it would be criminal if the Government permitted the Turks to regain control.

Other papers are perturbed at the idea that the Turks may be inclined to make excessive claims in their exaltation of victory.

Backing up the plan of joint action British warships from Smyrna have reached Chanak at the narrowest part of the Dardenelles, while the French have gone to Brusa, which is still held by the Greeks, in order to prevent the destruction of property. Chanak is a strong natural position which Kemal Pasha is likely to attempt to seize in the event of his essaying a coup in the direction of the Dardenelles.

Kemal Pasha's military qualities in his recent victories have been eugolised. The Greek Staff were apparently thrown off the scent and were not aware of the offensive three days before the blow fell owing to Kemal Pasha massing three Army Corps in mountainous and wooded country, which could not be observed from Greek aeroplanes and the attack being launched in a quite unexpected spot.

According to one account of the Greek flight they did not give battle after the fall of Ushak but laid waste to the countryside leaving Eastern Anatolia in ruins. It is stated that they were guilty of hideous atrocities as they fell back. This appears to explain the Kemalist communication to the League of Nations declining responsibility for the consequences of the foregoing and which was construed as anticipatory excuse for possible maltreatment of Christians.

The Secretary-General of the League of Nations replied, pointing out that atrocities on the part of one belligerent did not dispense an adversary from the obligation to respect civilised laws of war.

On the other hand the elation at the Greek debacle in Constantinople overstepped the bounds of control. Demonstrators broke the windows of some of the foreign institutions and damaged European shops in the Pera suburb. Sir Charles Harrington, the Allied Commander-in-chief, issued a proclamation threatening martial law in the event of a recurrence.

(Reuter's Service)

Malta, Sept. 12.—Two batteries of the Royal Garrison Artillery have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to proceed to Constantinople.

London, Sept. 11.—The Turco-Greek crisis is causing very great activity in Government quarters.

Mr. Lloyd George, who is in the country, is in constant telephonic communication with Downing Street as are also the War Office and the Admiralty, both of which are taking active steps to ensure unanimity of policy between Britain and the Allies in view of possible eventualities, arising from the Turkish successes.

It is feared in London that the Turkish complaint to the League of Nations on alleged Greek outrages during their retreat may be a prelude to retaliation but details of the entry of the Turks into Smyrna, received in official circles show that it was not accompanied by excesses.

There was a slight panic following the entry due to indiscriminate shooting by either Armenians or Greeks but quiet was restored in half an hour by the Turkish commander, who guaranteed that his troops would not take reprisals.

There was a recurrence of random firing accompanied by looting on Saturday when the Turkish commander undertook the patrolling of the city.

The Allied naval and military detachments were landed at Smyrna with the concurrence of the Turkish commander and their presence materially lessens danger to the refugees.

The certainty of shortage of foodstuffs is, however, disquieting.

Tsao Kun Has Finger In The Peking Pie

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Sept. 9.—An interesting story of how Peking is run from Paoting comes in the dispute which has arisen over the post of superintendent of the Peking Octroi. Mr. Tao Li is the present incumbent of that office.

It is claimed that his actions have not only displeased the public but have been likewise distasteful to Marshal Tsao Kun. At the same time, Tao Li is acting in the accounting department of the Peking-Hankow Railway. This fact has also aroused the opposition of Tsao Kun.

Therefore, just to show that he is maintaining a policy of hands off, Tsao Kun is supposed to have agreed to permit Tao Li to remain on the Peking line, but to have recommended Liu-yuan to succeeded Tao Li as Superintendent of the Octroi.

Mr. Liu is a right hand man of Marshal Tsao and likewise a close friend of General Wu. How the latter feels on this appointment is not known.

40,000 Bandits Drive People From Homes

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking Sept. 9.—A letter from a Reuter correspondent at Taiyuanfu, dated Sept. 6, says that the Shansi authorities were very busy in the middle of August in taking measures against the outlaw menace from Honan, Shensi and Fengchen.

According to information received by the Provincial Government there were some 40,000 bandits around Shansi. Refugees were coming into Shansi from all directions in thousands. Yungchen was full of these visitors. Even the family of the Governor of Shensi had crossed the Yellow River and had taken refuge in Shansi.

Adequate military preparations had been taken to cope with the outlaws if they crossed the border, but none risked that adventure.

The people of Shansi are continuing to show the keenest interest in local self-government. Shansi has 105 hsiens and each has sent a delegate to Taiyuanfu to attend meetings regarding self-government.

Big meetings took place in Taiyuan on Sept. 2, 3 and 4. These were attended by fifty-five Magistrates, the students of the Capital and neighboring towns and cities, by teachers, merchants, gentry and village elders.

On September 2 a procession was formed in which 20,000 people took part. Governor Yen addresses the Magistrates and other delegates every morning, and attends the public meetings in the afternoon.

The public meetings are now over, but arrangements have been made for the fifty-two Magistrates and 105 delegates to attend special meetings to discuss detailed plans of local self-government.

Tokio, Sept. 3.—Official despatches received at the Tokio office of the Formosa Government-General give a few details of the earthquake that shook Taihoku yesterday morning. According to these messages, five Japanese houses were totally demolished in Taihoku itself, and five others partially so. The earthquake was also responsible for the deaths of three persons and injuries to three others.

In the town of Giran two persons were killed and one seriously injured, while seven houses were completely wrecked and three others partially so.

Lightner Again Behind Bars In Portland Prison

Woods of Portland, who went to San Pedro to get Lightner, denied his claim, however, and he was taken back to Portland after a preliminary hearing before the United States Commissioner at Los Angeles on August 28.

Lightner was wanted in Portland for violations of the federal narcotic laws and for impersonating United States officers. He was indicted in Portland more than a year ago by the Federal grand jury on five counts and disappeared while on bail. The Secret Service finally located him on the Louise Nielsen where he had signed as a coal passer under an assumed name. When the vessel docked at Shanghai he was arrested by United States Marshal Porter and lodged in the American jail.

Lightner will soon be brought to trial in Portland on the charges of violations of the narcotic laws and impersonating a United States officer, and will also probably be charged with jail-breaking.

WOMAN WRITER, LONG IN SOVIET PRISON, IN PEKING

Mrs. Marguerite Harrison Suspected Of Aiding Bolsheviks

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, Sept. 4.—Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison, the American newspaper woman who spent some eight months in a Russian prison and who came out not blaming her captors, is expected to arrive in Peking within the next few days. She visited Japan for about one month and left for China via the northern route. This visit is of peculiar interest at the moment of the Russian Soviet delegation in Peking and their negotiations with Japan and China for trade agreements.

This interest arises out of the situation which Mrs. Harrison is said to have created. In that respect we quote the following from the Japan Advertiser of August 24:

"Charges that Mrs. Marguerite E. Harrison, American newspaper woman now in the Far East, is an agent of the Soviet Government of Russia have been cabled to the Philadelphia Public Ledger by its London correspondent, Norman Baxter. Mr. Baxter quotes the charges from the magazine, Truth which gives as its authority Mrs Star Baker, an English journalist who claims that through Mrs. Harrison's influence, she (Mrs Baker) was placed in a Soviet jail for five months, under harrowing experiences.

"The story which Truth publishes claims that Mrs. Harrison obtained her freedom from the imprisonment to which she was sentenced by the Soviet authorities by turning Bolshevik agent in April, 1920, thus avoiding the threat of death which was hanging over her. Truth says that Mrs. Baker was among several journalists and other persons respecting whom Mrs. Harrison gave false and incriminating information to the Soviet authorities, thus betraying others, even though guiltless, to the fate which she had escaped."

The Japan Advertiser adds "It has been impossible to substantiate here the story which Truth prints, but it is believed in quarters that there is some foundation to the charges that Mrs. Harrison has been or still is an agent for the Russian Government. It is remarked here in connection with the story that Mrs. Harrison is believed to be on her way to Chita."

Thus has her fame spread before her. Doubtless when Mrs. Harrison reaches Peking she will give out a statement as to the truth of this report.

Southern General Asked To Peking At Wu's Dictation

Peking, Sept. 9.—From Chinese sources comes a report that President Li Yuan-hung, at the urgent suggestion of General Wu Pei-fu, sent two delegates to Changsha to request General Li Lieh-chun, the defeated commander of the Anti-Northern Expedition, to come to Peking and discuss national conditions.

President Li was not very keen for this scheme but General Wu sent two telegrams in one day and apparently nothing was left for him to do but comply. A third delegate for the same purpose is said to have left Peking yesterday for Hunan.

Wu Pei-fu and Chao Heng-ti, the present Governor of Hunan have been on good terms, but when Chao Heng-ti invited his former enemy to come to his capital, General Wu began to play very cautiously for fear something might be in the wind. This was especially necessary in view of the fact that General Li Lieh-chen is considered as one of the best military men that China has.

A further difficulty in this Hunan dispute, lies in the fact that Li Lieh-chun has been backing Tan Yen-kai for the Civil Governorship election, which was to take place in Hunan on the 10th of the month. This in itself would annoy General Wu Pei-fu who has come out so strongly against the autonomous province idea of government. That is Tan Yen-kai's platform which puts him beyond the pale so far as General Wu is concerned.

Withdraw Charges Against Wallace At The Mixed Court

W. G. Wallace, formerly insurance manager for Arthur Spence and G. Y. Chalmers, who were sentenced recently in the British Court for running bogus companies, appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday when charges of obtaining money under false pretenses which had been made against him were dismissed.

Wallace had been charged with obtaining goods valued at $588 from Joseph Leibovich at Tientsin. Dr. O. Fischer stated to Assessor Jacobs and Magistrate Kwan yesterday that a communication from the Tientsin authorities withdrew the charges against his client. The court thereupon ruled that the charge here be withdrawn and that accused's personal bail be cancelled and his passports and other documents which had been held by the court be returned.

Wu Not Planning Military Conference

Loyang, Sept. 12.—To the Editor of THE CHINA PRESS:

It is stated in your valuable columns that military conferences have been or are going to be convoked by General Wu Pei-fu in Loyang and Chengchow and that General Wu, with the view to creating a certain interprovincial alliance, is contemplating the appointment of General Chang Fu-lai as commander-in-chief of the allied armies of the provinces concerned.

Having found these reports absolutely groundless, we beg to contend that General Wu never has attempted the convocation of any interprovincial meeting nor has he the slightest idea of doing so.

We should be much obliged if you would kindly have this telegram appear in your paper.

(Signed) Office of General Wu Pei-fu.

SEX EQUALITY

Pet Peeves Editor, The China Press

Dear Pet Peeves Editor: During the past few years the cry for equality in education by the Chinese women has been heard throughout China and it has been answered. Many universities and colleges adopted the system of co-education and threw open their gates to women.

As a male student in one of these institutions I was glad that the cry of my beloved sisters had been realised, and, above all, I was proud of my Alma Mater as a pioneer of this new era in China. Believe me, sir, that my appreciation of co-education came because of this and only this.

After a year's experience in this newly adopted system, in China I mean, I was quite convinced all the more that women are indeed worthy of note in high education. But there came also my material and the dynamic force for writing this letter.

Don't you know that we had been asked to honor our co-eds in all occasions? We had, therefore, to let them to retire first from class-rooms. But the girls were too graceful in all their actions, especially in the matter of leaving the class-room, picking up their books one by one, rising from their seats with many a twist in their bodies, and then moving leisurely and, indeed, as slowly as a snail out of the class-room. In a word they were awfully slow. Many students grew impatient in such waiting and even grumbled, "They hadn't taken rice enough."

But above all there is a thing to be feared rather than peeved about i.e., the worshipping of women. This worship came not for gaining lovers but just as a matter of "showing their colors." This was true not only among students but also among the teachers.

For instance in one of my laboratory periods in physics, a co-ed asked our professor to explain an exercise. The exercise was a simple one and was intended to be solved by students, but the professor took it up, explained in detail, and even solved it for her. What a patient professor!

A few minutes later I asked him the same question that the co-ed had just got answered from him, but he replied in a stern voice, "Why, that's a simple exercise. Work it out yourself," and went away from me.

There is no space more in your valuable paper, I believe, to let me name a lot of other cases. Hope you do publish this letter to let the world know that the sterner sex are beginning and will certainly have to yell for their equality in various institutions which the fair sex are enjoying and where they have supremacy. Sincerely yours.

HERE'S A REAL PEEVE!

Pet Peeves Editor, The China Press

Dear Sir.—A letter was printed on September 10 in your paper entitled "A Chinese protest" signed by L. S. Woo. Please let me make it known that Dr. L. S. Woo is a different man and he has full sympathy with the moral welfare movement. Yours truly.

L. S. Woo.

A GAMBLING HELL

Pet Peeves Editor, The China Press

Sir: Have you ever been in a gambling-hell? This one is situated in the Settlement. In order to mislead the eyes of the police its front door is a common shop. By a zigzag way, one may reach a room, where is placed a large table, enough to cover forty or fifty persons. The hell is low, dampy and small. The light is gloomy, although two gas lamps are enlightening; the air is dirty, although two Chinese ceiling fans are swinging.

Beside the right corner of the large table, there sit three operators; one shakes the dice, the next receives and issues the money, and the third one, who is the master, watches about his fortune that is keeping on. All gamblers, male and female, young and old, open their eager eyes, burn with hope and ambition, pull their dollars and bank-notes out of their pockets with shaking hands, aim their money to the place where they wish, and keep silence to wait upon fortune.

Suddenly, a cool, cracking and fearful voice breaks out, and the result of the dice is given. The man, who takes charge of receiving and issuing money, collects the money they win, and pays the money they lose, and his work is so quick and concise that even a great banker will find hard to beat him.

So far as gamblers are concerned, they may lose their property by one minute. Murmuring and laughing are often heard. Some gamblers are happy for they gain much. Some are disappointed for they lose all. Each gambler appears a different countenance.

Alas! thousands of people, instead of working their work, waste their useful time in this very hell, and instead of spending their money in right ways, they lose it by this idle doing. Robbery, suicide and murder are always reported in the newspapers of Shanghai. The society of Shanghai becomes poor and dangerous. Is it not right, that the gambling-hell is one of the causes! Yours truly.

OPIUM SELLERS SENT TO PRISON BY MIXED COURT

Heavy Fines Handed Out To Operators Of Dens

Sellers of opium and operators of opium dens fared ill at the Mixed Court yesterday, when prison sentences and heavy fines were handed out.

In consequence of a raid by Central District police Monday night five men appeared on the charge of selling the drug at 16-17 Honan Road, where 25 pounds of opium, money and account books were seized. The principal accused was ordered to pay a fine of $100 or go to jail for two months, the second accused was fined $20 and the third $10, the other two being dismissed.

The occupant of premises at 225 North Szechuen Road had a lot of hard luck while Detective Sub Inspector Conduit and other police were making a search Monday evening. First of all there was a loose board which made itself apparent, and disclosed 500 empty opium tins. Then, as they were all standing there in the gloom, a Cantonese sidled up the stairs, slipped 30 cents into D.S.I. Conduit's palm and whispered "opium." Following him, within five minutes, came three other seekers after the black smoke. The tenant of this place wasn't given any option but goes to jail for a month.

At 389 Tiendong Road the police seized 68 tins of the drug and a shop assistant, who was sentenced to a two weeks' term.

The keeper of a smoking den at 66 Loong Zien Yuen was fined $30, or one month. A tailor operating an establishment on the ground floor at 202A North Thibet Road was fined $40 and a woman found running a similar place upstairs was assessed a like amount. Nine patrons of the two places were fined $3 each.

Jurisdiction Point Is Raised Again In Mixed Court Action

The question of jurisdiction in the case of Chinese registered at foreign consulates was raised again at the Mixed Court yesterday when an application for cancellation of a warrant was made by Mr. N. E. Lurton before Assessor Jacobs and Magistrate Kwan.

In making application Mr. Lurton stated that last Thursday Dr. O. Fischer had applied for a warrant for his client alleging defalcations aggregating about $4,000. Counsel said that the accused was born in Macao and had been registered at the Portuguese Consulate here in 1910 and produced registration papers. The Mixed Court had no jurisdiction, he contended.

Dr. Fischer cited the ruling handed down some time ago by Assessor Blackburn, but the court held that in the present instance there was no question that registration had taken place long before the defalcations are alleged to have occurred and the man had certainly not rushed to the Portuguese authorities for protection from the consequences of his alleged misdeeds. The warrant would have to be cancelled but to comply with the usual formalities the Portuguese Consulate must communicate with the registrar.

Mrs. Harding Better, Physicians Report

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, Sept. 11.—Mrs. Harding's condition is slightly improved.

(China Press Service)

Washington, Sept. 10.—For the first time since the inauguration of President Harding the White House is barred to the public as a result of the illness of Mrs. Harding.

Despite the announcement of Brig.-General Sawyer, the President's personal physician, that Mrs. Harding's illness was not alarming, it is known that New York specialists have been sent for to determine whether or not an operation will be necessary.

Mrs. Harding's failure to respond to treatment has caused considerable anxiety about the White House. Constant applications of hot clothes are being made in an endeavor to reduce the possibility of uremic poisoning through the pores.

Gene Sarazen, Winner Of U.S. Open, Adds To Laurels

Pittsburgh, Aug. 20.—Gene Sarazen, the young Highland Country Club professional, added to his unique and unparalleled collection of golf titles when he vanquished Emmet French, stalwart home-bred pro at the Youngstown (Ohio) Country Club, by 4 and 3, in the final round of the fifth annual championship of the Professional Golfers' Association on the links of the Oakmont Country Club.

The victory of the young star, who only a few years ago was an unkown caddie toting clubs around Westchester County links, easily stamps him as one of the stars of all time, for it marked his third conquest of the present year, a feat never before equaled in the history of golf. His first achievement of note was the winning of the Southern open championship at New Orleans last Spring against a field that had in it most of the top-notchers, including Barnes and Hutchison, while his most notable deed was his winning of the open title at Skokie last month.

In gaining his place at the top of the Professional Golfers' Association Gene had no easy task confronting him, but throughout the week he bore himself as a champion of champions, defeating Tom Mahan of Haverhill, Mass., and Willie Ogg of Worcester, Mass., on the opening day by 3 and 2 and 2 and 1, respectively; Frank Sprogell of Memphis, Tenn., by 9 and 7 on the second day; Jock Hutchison of Chicago by 3 and 1 on the third day, and Bobby Cruikshank of the Shackamaxon Club by 3 and 2 in the semi-finals.

When today's match ended on the thirty-third hole, little Gene, the hero of all Pittsburghers, to whom he has become a popular idol, was lifted on the shoulders of the members of his home club, who were conspicuous in the gallery, which numbered two thousand, and borne in triumph to the club house, where he was presented with the diamond medal that goes with the winning of the Professional Golfers Association event and the purse of $500. French, the vanquished, was not forgotten, for he, too, was cheered to the echo. His consolation prize consisted of a purse of $300 and a gold medal.

French, who seems to have a hoodoo pursuing him, failed to shake it off today. Regarded for years as one of the top-notchers among the professionals, Emmet had always just fallen short of fame, and today was no exception. Without detracting one iota from Sarazen's justly earned glory, it may be truthfully stated that French had more than his share of bad breaks.

The new Professional Golfers Association champion not only held his own against French in driving today, but he outplayed the latter on most of the approaches and especially on the green. Sarazen's putting margin is seen in the fact that on thirteen of the greens he took only one putt, and he used more than two putts on only one. French, on the other hand, missed several short putts and especially at times when it was essential for his welfare to get them down.

BASEBALL MAY BE NATIONAL SPORT OF FRANCE SOON

Boston, August 12.—Baseball in France is a growing game and in a decade may be the national sport. After adults who tried it turned away with broken fingers and conviction that they were too old to learn, the game was introduced into the public schools in modified form and has already proven popular.

This was the composite general statement by members of the French tennis team, which today started its quest in America of the classic Davis cup, after their visit yesterday to Braves field to see the American national game as played by leading national teams.

It was no new experience for Allan Muhr, American born, who is captain of the French team, but for Andre Gobert, veteran member, and Henri Cochet and Jean Borotra, youngsters, it was the first glimpse of the game.

"The Whites are now dangerous" Borotra remarked as the Braves came to bat, big Hank Gowdy, with two bludgeons in hand.

"The referee he stands close to the receiver does he not?" Cochet observed as Gowdy swung within inches of the catcher's head.

"It is a good one," was Borotra's exclamation as the ball soared high on a long fly.

"It is not, it is a bad one," came in lower voices as it dropped into a fielder's hands.

Gobert said he did not understand how baseball players could work day in and day out "with no chance to ride on the river, or enjoy a rest." But when he was told that many played as much golf in a day as they played baseball, and at the same time received $10,000 or more for a season of six months, he shrugged his shoulders as if not understanding.

Baseball in France did not suffer more than a local and temporary setback by the French men at the military rest camps who tried the game and gave it up, tennis players said. At St. Cyr, where after a week of baseball by several hundred convalescing soldiers 150 were found to have broken fingers, it was decided that the game was one to begin young.

Accordingly it was introduced into the schools, as a game that is a compromise between outdoor and indoor baseball, the balls being softer and larger than the regulation baseball.

The youngsters are taking to it and in 10 or 15 years France should have teams able to meet American competition.

The prospective visit of American professional teams next winter, Captain Muhr said, would help to establish the game. He said the teams, probably the Washington Americans and New York Giants, would be given two dates in or near Paris, one at least at the New Olympic stadium.

Capablanca Wins Chess Title Again

London, Aug. 18.—Jose R. Capablanca of Cuba, the world's chess champion, was declared the winner of the international chess tournament after the closing game today. He will receive a prize of £250.

Capablanca throughout the tournament displayed his usual skill against some of the world's best masters, winning or securing a draw in every match he played. He brought his total to thirteen points today by winning from Davide Marotti of Italy.

The most notable game of the concluding day's play was that between A. Rubinstein of Poland and the English player, R. O. Yates. Rubinstein wanted very much to win in order to gain third prize, but owing to the strong fight put up by the Englishman he had to be content with a draw and fourth prize, Yates is the only British representative in the nine who receive prizes.

The prize winners, in addition to Capablanca, are: A. Alechine, Russia, with 11½ points; Dr. M. Vidmar, Jugoslavia, 11; Rubinstein, 10½; E. D. Bogoljubow, 9; Dr. S. Tartakover, Russia, and A. Reti, 8½; and Yates and G. Maroczy, Hungary, 8.

The prizes are £150 for second place, £100 for third place, £70 for fourth, with smaller prizes for the others.

The scores of those who did not win prizes are: H. E. Atkins, England, 6 points; M. Euwe, Holland, 5½; Snosko Borowsky, Russia, and M. Wahltuch, England, 5; E. G. Watson Australia, and J. S. Morrison, Canada, 4½; and Marotti, 1½.

The games today between Alechine and Tartakover and Yates and Rubinstein were drawn. Snosko Borowsky defeated Watson. In the other matches E. D. Bogoljubow beat J. S. Morrison of Canada and Dr. M. Vidmar of Jugoslavia beat M. Euwe of Holland. Drawn games were played by M. Wahltuch of England and H. E Atkins of England and by G. Maroczy of Hungary and A. Reti of Czechoslovakia.

NEW YORK LEADS IN BOTH LEAGUES AS SEASON ENDS

The major league baseball standings on September 1 show the New York Giants hanging on to the lead in the National League with a margin of eight games over Chicago's Cubs, while in the American League the New York Yankees are a scant three-game jump on the slugging St. Louis aggregation.

The St. Louis Cardinals and the Cubs are staging a spectacular fight for precedence in the way of second place in the National, the Chicago nine's defeat of Philadelphia on the day previous to the tabulation putting them back on the next-best shelf. Cincinnati and Pittsburgh are also pushing the issue and both are figured for outside chances in the pennant race.

Car Company Explains Position On Contract

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, Sept. 9.—In view of the wide publicity and conflicting comments in both the foreign and Chinese press, regarding an agreement recently consummated between the Ministry of Communications, the Peking-Suiyuan Railway, and the General American Car Company, the Chung Mei News Agency, feeling that the public's welfare would be served by a full presentation of all sides of the questions at issue, requested the Car Company to make a public statement of facts from their point of view.

The local representative of the Company has kindly consented to issue such a statement, which this Service is pleased to quote as follows:

An apparent misunderstanding exists regarding the nature of an agreement recently concluded between the Ministry of Communications (Peking-Suiyuan Railway) and The General American Car Company, for the payment of railway cars delivered by the Company to that line. There seems to be a certain apprehension that this agreement will involve foreign control of the Railway, the charging of high rates of interest, and danger to the payment of wages of railway employees. Such apprehensions are utterly baseless. In the interest of truth and accuracy, the following statement of the facts is made:

AMERICAN CONCERN

The General American Car Company, an American concern of Chicago, represented by Mr. W. W. Fowler, has been transacting business with the Chinese Government Railways for a number of years. Its only purpose is and has been to carry on bona fide business transactions with the Chinese Government without any political or other ulterior considerations whatsoever.

On April 20, 1921, the General American Car Company signed a contract with the Chinese Ministry of Communications for the sale to the Peking-Suiyuan Railway of some six hundred freight cars valued at about two and one-third million gold dollars, the period of payments to cover about five years. Virtually nothing, aside from the initial payment of some one half million gold dollars, has been paid by the Railway for interest or principal, due to the existing financial difficulties in which the Railway finds itself. There is now past due and in default the sum of over one half a million gold dollars, and the Railway informed the Company that no further payments, either on the principal or interest, can be made for the present.

At the same time there remains unpaid principal and interest amounting to three hundred and fifty thousand gold dollars on another contract for certain materials delivered by the Company to the Railway. Two-thirds of this sum is now in default, no payments having been made for nearly one year and the Railway states they can make no definite promises regarding further payments.

CONSULTS MINISTRY

In an effort to assist the Peking-Suiyuan Railway to make their overdue payments, thereby saving the Railway from further serious embarrassment in this connection, the Company consulted with the Ministry of Communications and evolved the agreement now under consideration. As previously stated, there seems to be a certain apprehension that this agreement will involve foreign control of the Railway, the charging of high rates of interest and danger to the payment of wages of railway employes and payments to other creditors.

In order to correct these wrong impressions let us analyse the agreement. It is simply this, that the Ministry of Communications or the Railway will appoint one of their Chinese employes to serve as a car accountant or car record clerk, who will record and check the daily performances and earnings of the cars furnished by the Company to the Railway. Of these earnings, a portion is to be set aside, by the Railway itself, to pay off gradually the amounts due by the Railway to the Company.

This car record clerk is in no wise appointed by the Company and is not in any sense to be the chief accountant of the Railway, as has been alleged, nor do his duties involve in any way even a partial supervision of or control over the Railway's revenues, nor operate in violation of the principles on which the Railway was constructed. On the contrary, the car record clerk is appointed by the Ministry of Communications or the Railway; he is a Chinese; he handles no funds or revenues of the Railway, whatsoever; all payments under this agreement are made by the Railway itself through its regular chief accountant.

There also appears to be the impression that the rate of interest has been increased to 12 percent. Such is not the case. The rate of interest remains at 8 percent per annum, the same as under the original contract. There is, however, a clause which is manifestly fair, providing that the interest may be increased to 12 percent, only in case the Railway defaults in the payment of the minimum sum agreed upon. This clause is not mandatory but is optional with the Company which will no doubt give the Railway every consideration. It should be remarked that as a matter of fact, this question is entirely in the hands of the Railway for the reason that with the greatly increased revenues which the Railway will have when these 600 cars are put in service, they should have no difficulty in meeting the minimum payments agreed upon, thus keeping the interest rate at 8 percent. Furthermore, it should be remembered that no loan has recently been made to the Chinese Government Railways by a Chinese bank at less than twelve percent interest. Advances are sometimes made at more than double that rate. This fact further emphasises the fairness of the Company in asking only eight per cent interest.

Another erroneous impression appears to prevail that if this agreement is carried out the Railway will not have sufficient funds left with which to pay other creditors and the salaries of employees on the line. It should be pointed out in this connection that the six hundred cars furnished by the Company to the Peking-Suiyuan Railway, increase by 24,000 tons the Railway's facilities for transporting freight, and represent approximately 100 percent increase over the present available tonnage of the Railway. It obviously follows that the Railway's revenues should increase correspondingly thereby (even after meeting the payment to the Car Company), giving additional security and making available monthly, over and above the present revenues, a large additional sum for the payment of salaries, wages and other obligations.

In conclusion it is well to point out that the very nature of all the Company's transactions with the Chinese Government Railways has added greatly to the Railway and industrial development of China. The attitude of the Company is eminently fair, helpful and reasonable. The present plan involves no supervision over Chinese railways or finance.

The ever-increasing army of men and women who have experience of this excellent medicine generally use some such phrase as "priceless" or "Worth a guinea a box" when speaking of Beecham's Pills. This is certainly high praise. But it is well-merited. Beecham's Pills have proved, times out of number, to be a "priceless" preparation in the treatment of digestive ailments. They bring relief; they safeguard the health; they effect remarkable cures. Londoner Piling Up Big Fortune Through Prayer

London.——The prayer-merchant is back in town, has reopened his supplication-shop in the West-end and is praying to S. R. O. capacity at $10 per prayer.

What's your difficulty—bunions, nasal catarrh, failure to find a flat or don't you get along with your wife? It doesn't matter. Frederick L. Rawson, the prayer-doctor, will make you right, whatever your woes.

Rawson, an engineer by profession and member of the Institution of Electrical Engineers, found praying a more attractive profession. He was making it pay in London back in wartime, but closed shop to visit America, where his prayers were worth thousands of dollars. Profitable prayers, in fact, encouraged him to establish offices in the United States. He did Canada and Australia, then the continent, establishing prayer-branches all along the way, and is back now locking after the head office.

"It's all a question of right thinking," Rawson said. "When a man knows how to pray rightly he can help himself out of any trouble imaginable. I teach men how to pray. I pray for them. I show them the power of God to remove all ills. I show them that in the eyes of God these ills never existed. They're cured."

About 200 patients a week have been visiting Rawson to receive the healing benefits of "true prayer," as the doctor calls his medicine.

From the sale of this Medicine, the parson-doctor admits his various offices remit about $5,000 a week. Individual prayers, $10 each. A course of prayer lessons, $25.

But only the heathen can see the faintest incongrity in the prayer business being on a sound, paying basis.

"Heaven is run in a business-like fashion—why not my prayer business, which teaches the road to Heaven?" says Rawson. "Besides, I don't keep this money. I put it back into the cause. I'm thousands of pounds poorer than when I retired from the engineering business."

A large staff of typists is maintained as an adjunct to the industry, for there are many cases of absent treatment to be handled. Since Rawson re-opened in London, cables have been received from patients in the United States and Australia, he claims, asking for treatment. Two of them were cancer patients.

Assistants may handle these requests, under the personal direction of the master prayer. Over everything dominates the personality, the guiding hand of Rawson, with his prayers for every ailment. Here are some samples:

"There are no bunions. God expresses himself through the feet of man. God-Man is pure and perfect."

"There is no difficulty about finding a flat. God supplies all men's needs."

"There is no astigmatism. Man has perfect sight, for God sees through man."

The last prayer would be discreetly omitted by lesser men than Rawson, handsome, serious and dominant, but be-spectacled.

"Then why do you wear glasses?" a voice sharply demanded when Rawson, at a recent lecture, sprang his no ascitymatism prayer.

That was light lunch for Rawson.

"Because," he quickly but patiently replied, "it would have required perhaps half an hour's praying every day for three years for me to have cured my eyes. Considering the good I could have done in that period—and have done—for other people's ills, it would have been extremely selfish, not to say un-Christlike, to have spent all that time on myself."

Peking Teachers To Wage War On Chief Of Schools Bureau

Peking, Sept. 9.—A meeting was held yesterday by the representatives of the eight government schools at one o'clock. Kao En-hung, according to the reports, was the main subject of the discussion. They are against the Minister of Communications and are going to let the country know it. They agreed on a set of seven indictments of the crimes of Kao En-hung as pertain to them and the government at large.

The specific allegations are that Kao En-hung has been practicing deceitful and fraudulent ways with President Li Yuan-hung, that he has been trying to run the President, that he has failed to carry out his promises, that he has endeavored to set himself up as the arbitrator in all matters that come up for discussion before the Cabinet, that he incited the staff of the Ministry of Communications to take violent measures against the teachers and staff of the Ministry of Education, and lastly that he tries to shirk his responsibilities. It is their plan to have these statements issued publicly within a short time after they have been worked over.

This action will probably go down as one more political move against Kao En-hung. While the teachers may have a good cause behind them, it is felt by many that they have lent themselves to political tricksters in their attacks on Kao.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

September 12, 1922

Spot and forward bar silver were each up ⅛d. in London yesterday. The New York price advanced to 69¾ cents and the London and New York cross rate declined to 445½.

The only change in our Official quotations here today was a rise in the Franc rate to 1,000. Our market here throughout the day was steady.

Speculators both bought and sold although perhaps on balance more inclined to buy than sell. Banks were more inclined to sell than buy, particularly for forward delivery.

The lowest rates at which business in Sterling was done were 3-5 9-16 September, 3-5 5/8 October and 3-5 11/16 for forward delivery.

The lowest for Gold Dollars was 77-¼ September, 77-⅜ October and 77-7-16 for forward delivery. Banks at all times were good sellers at these rates, buying Sterling at 1-16 to 1-8d higher and Gold Dollars about 1-4 point higher.

A fair amount of business in Yen was done at 62½ for October delivery.

Some business in Franc T.T. was done at 1020 for forward delivery. Banks were quoting 3-6½ for Sterling bills, 783/4 for Gold Dollar bills and 1045 for Franc bills. There were, however, very few bills offering.

India bought a small amount of silver in London yesterday and the market there as well as in New York is reported as steady.

Find Opium Hidden In "Cough Pills"

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Sept. 9.—The General Secretary of the International Anti-Opium Association says that a recent seizure of 60,000 "cough pills" by the Maritime Customs at a treaty port illustrates an aspect of the morphia trade which is by no means new, but the statements regarding the potency of these pills, as printed in large type on very striking covers, are not only original but amusing were it not that this is but one of a score of methods of creating and supplying the drug habit.

The statement is made that these pills are a most effective remedy against scabies. They are said to be manufactured by the Golden Star Company, Hongkong.

The distributing agents of the pills are Kiu Foo & Co. of Shanghai and Osaka. On hearing these details the Association wrote to the Colonial Secretary of Hongkong and today a reply has been received stating that no such firm exists in the Colony.

This Japanese Wants Higher Birth Rate

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, Sept. 4.—A movement, which runs directly counter to the principle of birth control, has originated with Mr. Tetsukichi Nishiyama, Principal of the Imperial Elementary School and Kindergarten, and has already won considerable support.

It has for its object the presentation of a petition to the Imperial Diet requesting some form of legislation in favor of the parents of three or more children.

The idea that the promoters have in mind is that the Government should be asked to exempt from income taxes the parents of three children and to assist with education subsidies those who have more than five.

Germany Today

(The following notes are from the notebook of Herbert Bayard Swope, Executive Editor of The New York World, who has just returned from Europe. His notes on conditions in France and England will be published in succeeding issues. Besides winning the Pulitzer Prize for meritorious newspaper work in 1917, he was associate chairman of the War Industries Board and Chairman of the American Committee on Publicity at the Peace Conference.)

GERMANY bewilders. It seems to be everything it isn't and it isn't anything it seems to be. A visitor from Mars, ignorant of the conditions that brought about Germany's present status, on arriving there would say her people are prosperous and busily employed—Busy they are, prosperous they are not.

Germany today is like a great beehive in which every bee is busily engaged in and outside the hive, working with feverish energy but unable to store up honey. Everything is shadow; there is no substance. The Germans dare not save, for tomorrow the mark may be worth a fraction of what it is today.

As a result there is a wild orgy of spending. This violence to the usual Teutonic orderliness is due less to indulgence than to necessity. The flight from the mark is only another name for an effort to escape pauperisation. Wages, profits must be expended instantly so that these may be translated into assets of greater permanence and value than the intangible, evanescent value inherent to the mark.

Last year a German family started to save for a vacation this summer. They denied themselves. They saw the mark steadily recede in value, but hoped against hope that circumstances would restore it to its previous estate. When they were ready to leave they found the sum of their vacation money imposing in the number of marks, but worth about one-ninth, in buying power, of what it was when they started their fund.

The standard of living in Germany is steadily declining. Salary earners and possessors of small, fixed incomes are the chief victims. The extremes of the social group—the laborer and the capitalist—are the best off. The laborer insists upon a readjustment whenever the mark falls to a new low level, the capitalist measures the worth of his securities in terms of gold, and to him, therefore, the problem is not so pressing, since he can be indifferent as to whether or not his holdings are rated at one hundred marks to the dollar or one thousand marks to the dollar—it is the dollar standard with which he is concerned. Practically all Germany lives from hand to mouth. It has been impossible to regulate the cost of living, although the municipalities have been successful in legislating against exorbitant increases in rent. Meat once a week is a treat for the average family.

Houses are being stripped of plate, linen, ornaments, furniture and books. The intellectuals are especially affected. It is commonplace to see women of delicate breeding doing mental work.

There is little hope in Germany. The minds of the people are confused. One faction says the foreigners who come over raise prices. Another says that were if not for the foreigners who bring their good money to Germany, the German cataclysm would be less avertible.

The Germans believe they cannot pay the reparation bill. It must be added, in the interest of truth, that they do not want to pay it and would not if they could. Dr. Rathenau said as much to me a few days before he was killed. The Germans feel that the present status of the reparations has put their head in a noose; that the Allies, and especially France, are holding a blank check on which the more they pay the more they will have to pay.

But even with fixed reparations in a heavily reduced amount, it must not be thought that thus evil conditions would be immediately relieved, for this would bring about the stabilisation of the mark, with results that at first would be serious. The first consequence would be dislocation of industry due to the inability of Germany to sell cheaply in the foreign markets. Hence, unemployment would follow, since production would temporarily cease. Also the labor wage would be incompetent to purchase as much as it does under inflation, since a shrinkage would come before any reduction in the cost of living would be apparent.

The Germans feel they will be damned if they do and damned if they don't. Every German statesman apprehends the grave danger of bread riots and social revolution under present conditions; they fear the same effect in the event of stabilisation.

In Germany, Great Britain is easily the most popular of the foreign nations. France is regarded as seeking only the destruction of Germany. America is considered to be false to its promises. The Germans say they were led to accept the harshness of the armistice and the peace treaty by the assurance that America would see to it that the proper interests of the nation were safeguarded—that Germany was to be a ward of the League of Nations until she could qualify for membership. Instead, Germany feels that the nations have made of her a bone which they are picking clean. In this mixed state of mind it is difficut to make a pronouncement as to the present trend of the German character, but there is reason to believe that the militarism of other days finds small support. It brought the nation to where it is today, and they are fed up with it. I do not believe it would be possible to cuff Germany into another war—at least not while the present generation is at the helm. The slightest suggestion of such a course brings hundreds of thousands of demonstrators to the surface in all the great industrial centers. However strong the opposition to militarism may be, there is a well defined insistence that, if Germany is to be occupied then England and America are to retain their forces in the occupied area at any cost. The Germans frankly say they fear the outcome were France and Belgium to be left alone on the Rhine.

It is certain that there are vast forces in Germany working for the return of monarchism. It may be fairly hazarded that if a plebiscite were taken, the vote would be close, for your German dearly loves a boss. He wants to have his laws made, his commerce developed, his pictures painted, his children blessed, his slops removed, his answers regulated, his drinks provided, "by order."

If a monarchy returns to Germany I personally doubt if it will be a Hohenzollern, although the young son of the Crown Prince might prove acceptable. The throne is more likely to be offered to a Bavarian Wittelbach—such as Rupprecht, or one of the Saxon Wettins who rejoice in the same name under which the royal house of England lived, moved and had their private beings before the war prompted the British monarch to adopt the patronymic of Windsor.

Eventually, however, Germany will become a real republic. The time will depend on her workout of the processes of political education. Court favorites, important politicians and great industrialists are now, for the most part, arrayed against democracy. A majority of the student body seems to be anti-republic. But the "people" want a republic and they lack leadership. A story characteristic of political conditions, told in Berlin, illustrates this. A man goes into a restaurant and orders a "Wirth herring." "Wirth herring?" says the waiter interrogatively. "What is a Wirth herring?" "A Bismarck herring without a head."

In the first six months of 1922 almost 700 newspapers and other periodicals were forced to suspend publication in Germany because of the tremendous increase in the cost of production.

The philosophy of despair that has seized German minds has affected the German theater. There are few things worth seeing in Berlin, and even these are not done with that finish and effectiveness that was once so characteristic of the German stage.

The reign of music continues unbroken. The Germans find their solace in their orchestras. There is no middle ground in the German movies; they are either very good or wholly bad. When they deal with historical or German subjects they are usually adequate. When they deal with affairs outside of Germany they tend to be soft and flabby.

Russia no longer looms as the promised land for Germany. The average German thinks of Russia with dread, for fear that what occurred there may be repeated in his own country by its own Reds. At that, the Red peril is no longer imminent. Saxony is the reddest division of Germany. In that section upon registering at a hotel you are compelled to sign a paper releasing the management from all responsibility in event of your property being stolen.

The American Ambassador in Germany, Alonson Houghton, has made a strong impression. He was educated in that country and has a thorough understanding of the Germanic character, without in any way, being pro-German.

As one travels through the countryside one sees the fields alive with the very young and the very old and almost all of them women. Scarcely a man between twenty and forty-five is to be seen at work on the farms. Most of those between these ages were killed in the war. Those who were not are working in the cities engaged in industry. The women of these ages are similarly employed. For every man or boy seen in the fields there are forty women or girls.

There are few cows visible in Germany, most of them having been seized for reparations. Oxwains are common and horse drawn vehicles are also to be seen but one meets few automobiles or motor lorries in the rural sections.

In the cities the taxis are of antiquated patterns. In the villages and on the farms one seldom sees the inhabitants in shoes they all go barefoot.

The women work in the fields from 7 in the morning until 6 at night. Shaved heads among the men are rapidly becoming national physical characteristics. The explanation is obvious. It saves haircutting expenses.

In the larger cities every well-to-do family has to take in at least one or two poor students as boarders, either free or for nominal sums.

The German attitude toward the Kaiser varies, but, on the whole the bulk of the people seem to think of him as one who had his opportunity for service and lost it. There is a pronounced feeling that he should have gone down with his ship—that he should have died at the head of his troops. They see him as devoting the remainder of his existence to an attempt to justify it. They talk of the Kaiser of the period before 1914 with veneration; they speak of the Kaiser at Doorn with contempt.

A Marvel Of The Heart

The heart of one man in a life-time pumps as much blood through the body as the blood weight of the ten million men killed during the war, according to Dr. J. Plesch, a professor in the Berlin Medical School, an authority on blood circulation and the first man to perfect a system for measuring the blood content of the human body.

"The heart of a man weighing 133 pounds and living sixty years," he said, "pumps during the course of his life 161,500,000 quarts of blood. The world war cost 10,000,000 lives. Estimating the average weight of a man's body at 133 pounds and the weight of the blood content at 5 percent of the total, some 21,400,000 quarts of blood were shed during the war."

Prof. Plesch used this illustration to show how much more powerful is this marvel of nature than the destruction which mankind with the most ingenious instruments of warfare was able to inflict upon itself in five years of desperate effort.

Just About A Small Town

At the Grand Central Terminal, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, a man whose lungs are his fortune announces the readiness of the Southwestern Limited train, calling out: "All aboard for Cleveland, Wellington, New London, Shelby, Crestline, Galion, Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and St. Louis!" Of those communities New London, Ohio, is perhaps the smallest, yet it is not without historic interest.

The oldest man living at New London is Orlando Parley Post, who came from Casanovia, N. Y. He was born in 1832. In 1944, his father, Isaiah Post, and Hiram Woodruff bought 1,000 hogs in the Buckeye State at 2 cents a pound, paying half in cash and half in broadcloth. They drove the hogs from New London, Ohio to Albany, N. Y., 530 miles. On the way Post and Woodruff, with their brawling porkers, were overtaken by 500 turkeys, from their own neighborhood, also being driven to Albany. The turkeys were fed daily, and arrived at their destination without the loss of one. When the more musically inclined members of that orchestra of 1,500 artists en route tuned up, the grunting, squealing and gobbing must have formed as remarkable an overture as ever burst forth in the woods.

In 1850, when the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railroad, now a part of the Big Four, was under construction, Orlando Post assisted in the grading, using, two yoke of oxen on the plow. Among the famous oxen employed in building the Bee Line, as it was first called at New London, were Jack and Culb, Star and Bright, and Buck and Berry. The highest price then paid for a yoke of oxen was $115, but a good pair could be bought for $65. My hat is off to the ancient oxen that hauled many a pioneer to Ohio; and for his aid in putting America on its feet let our silver dime bear the figure of the head and horns of the ox. The buffalo glorified on the nickel never did an honest day's work in his life.

Though hale and hearty at the age of ninety, Orlando Post has not always escaped illness. Seventy years ago the prevalence of ague in the vicinity of New London gave rise to the report that babies were born shaking, and Orlando Post caught his share of the chills and fever. After a prolonged contest with the disease, he found permanent relief by swallowing twice daily a teaspoonful of gunpowder in a glass of milk. Children of seven years, troubled with worms, chewed black navy plug tobacco and swallowed the juice as an antidote. "There are so many cures nowadays," said an optimist, "that the man must be very obstinate who dies."

THE CABINETMAKER

Of Dante the people used to say, "There goes the man that has looked into hell." The late Eli Thomas, cabinetmaker, often related experiences of his excursions to the world of spirits, where he walked at will. "Heaven is not reached by a single bound," says the poet; but Eli Thomas thought otherwise. To him the New Jerusalem seemed nearer than Mansfield or Sandusky. Because of his adherence to the Swedenborgian faith, his townsmen generally called him Swedenberg. His wife having passed away, he did not wait to the end of life to follow, but declared that he knew her street and number in the celestial city, where her neighbors were angels and that he could find his way to her dwelling without aid. When questioned as to why he returned from so delightful a region, Thomas always replied that his work in this world was not yet finished. Prof. Youmans said that the visions of the Swedenborgians were due to the drinking of coffee. It is told of Thomas that he slept at his cabinet shop in one of the coffins which he made.

The Major of New London is A. M. Turner. His father, the late Stephen Turner, brought the family from the State of New York to Ohio more than seventy years ago, oxen hauling the party over corduroy roads from Cleveland to the new home in the woods, nearly fifty miles, between sunrise and sundown. This is fast time for the cloven hoof. Stephen Turner supported his family by helping to clear the forest and by splitting rails at fifty cents a hundred, often bringing wild game from the timber. In his old age he spent some weeks with a daughter at Fremont, Ohio. On his way down town one day he met a courteous stranger, who shook hands with him, asked where he hailed from and manifested such interest in his welfare as they walked together toward the business streets of Fremont that he left upon Mr. Turner's mind a most pleasant impression. The stranger proved to be Gen. Rutherford B. Hayes, who had been Governor of Ohio and President of the United States. Up to that time a Democrat, Mr. Turner for the remainder of his life voted the Republican ticket.

A NOTED LUNATIC

The "Immortal J. N." the most noted lunatic that ever wandered over the United States, was fond of visiting New London, J. N. Free, formerly of Tiffin, Ohio, but later of the world, was born about 1826. At 40 he was tall and erect, with a powerful frame, long hair, piercing eye and the look of a monomaniac. He had been a prosperous business man, of strong intellect, considerable talent and more than ordinary literary attainments. In business in California about 1855 he brooded over extensive losses on sea and land, became demented and began to wander up and down the Union.

When the civil war broke out Free fancied that on him fell the whose pressure of the struggle. He held North and South both right and both wrong—right from their standpoints, but wrong from each other's. This he denominated his theory, and he strove to "lift the

Talks For Amateur Astronomers

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS
Eminent Astronomer and Authority on Subjects of Scientific Interest.

"Can the north star be seen in any part of the world—at the equator or south of it, for instance?—J. C., Westerly, R. I."

Geometrically, the north pole of the heavens, assumed to be at an infinite distance, should lie on the horizon as viewed from the equator. Atmospheric refraction, however, has the effect of making objects at the horizon appear to be elevated above their real plane.

The amount of the apparent displacement varies with the altitude of the object, and with the density, temperature, etc., of the atmosphere. On the average it is something over half a degree.

If, then, the north star were exactly at the pole, and if the observer at the equator were at sea-level, he could, theoretically, see that star about half a degree above the northern horizon. But, in fact the turbidity and unsteadiness of the atmosphere when the line of light runs close to the earth's surface might render the star invisible.

However, the north star is not exactly at the pole of the heavens, but more than a degree away from it, in the direction of the star Delta Cassiopeiae. Accordingly, when Cassiopeiae as seen from the equator above the northern horizon, as it is about midnight at the beginning of April, the north star will be more than a degree above the northern horizon, and refraction will increase its altitude to about a degree and three-quarters. In such circumstances it may be clearly visible.

When the north star is in the position just described it should a degree and three-quarters south of the equator and may be seen from points still farther south, provided that they are sufficiently elevated. It should, for instance, be plainly visible from the summit of Chimborazo, in about two degrees south latitude.

"I read your articles every night, and would like to ask a few questions. When I look through a small telescope at any of the stars (I looked at Mars last night) I see the round body, but also very near the star appears a small patch of blue on the left and one of red on the right Why is this? When we look at the sky, how can we tell which is Venus, which is Jupiter, etc? —J. V. V., Detroit."

There is trouble with your telescope. The colors you see are due to dispersion of the waves of different length, and consequently different color, that make up the light of the star. The trouble may lie either in the object-glass or in the eye-piece. If it is in the eye-piece, the remedy is simply to try another, but if the object-glass is at fault the matter is more serious. It may be that the lenses are strained in their cell. I am assuming that you have a telescope with a socalled achromatic object-glass, composed of two lenses of different kinds of glass.

If you are using a single-lens object-glass you cannot expect to get a colorless image of a star, although the "patches" of color that you describe should not appear if the lens is a good one and properly mounted. It may be that the object glass is not set square to the optical axis of the telescope tube. Or the two lenses composing the object-glass may not be truly centered. A false centering will expand the light of a star so as to show blue on one side and red on the other.

If it is not convenient for you to consult a telescope-maker, experiment yourself a little and see if you cannot discover the source of the trouble. A good telescope, when the air is steady, should show the image of a medium bright star as a perfectly round, very small disc, surrounded by one or two thin circles or rings of light. The star disc that you see is not the real disc of the star, but is due to diffraction.

The real disc is too small to be seen, and the larger the telescope the smaller the diameter of the spurious disc. The image of a planet, like Mars, should appear sharply defined, and in this case the real disc is seen, becoming larger as the magnifying power is increased. But owing to atmospheric troubles the magnifying power can seldom be pressed to the limit, which for most purposes does not exceed fifty diameters per inch aperture (i.e., diameter) of object-glass.

To recognise the planets you should know in advance about where they are placed among the stars at the time of observation. The first thing is to learn the constellations and principal stars so that you can spot a stranger, like a planet, on sight. Venus and Mercury are never seen except in the evening or the morning sky—never at midnight. Jupiter, Mars and Saturn may be visible at any time of the night, and at any apparent angular distance from the sun up to 180 degrees. Mars is always reddish. Jupiter silvery. Saturn rather dull, like polished lead. Venus very brilliant and sometimes sparkling like a huge star or an electric lamp.

veil" that the public might understand it. Meetings were held everywhere.

When no one came to hear him at appointed meetings he applied to the Sheriff to be locked up and martyred, if necessary, for the truth. He never paid for anything. On many railroads he carried passes, but it grieved him sorely to find that he could not conquer the closefisted general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania. Hotels received nothing for meals furnished him. To the proprietor of the New London hostelry where he had eaten dinner he would say:

"Will you throw off half my ball?"

Upon winning the concession he would remark:

"I can't let you surpass me in generosity so I will throw off the other half."

In 1866 he interviewed Jeff Davis in jail at Fortress Monroe, and about that time he advised President Andrew Johnson by letter as to the state of the country.

Free died in the asylum for the insane at Toledo, Ohio, in June, 1906. His body was buried in the cemetery at McCutchenville, Ohio.

MAPLE SIRUP DAYS

With what mingled emotions does a man, after long years of absence from his native village, return and dine at the hotel or the bakery! At New London I inquired: "Where is the best restaurant? Of course they are all good, but show me the pride of the town!" What a curious eating house it proved to be! No Greeks frying potatoes, no such dainty as "ross biff" on the bill of fare, no crashing of dishes, no tipping of waiters, no stealing of hat or coat! I actually forgot my fountain pen on a desk at the post office for two hours one day, went back and found it where I had left it! Verily, the Golden Age seems to be taking a fresh start; or, with Satan brought to book, is not the millennium setting in?

Upon coming out of the restaurant I met Charles Hamilton, prosperous farmer, who said, as he extended his hand:

"I've heard about you."

"Your father, James Hamilton, claimed relationship to Henry Ward Beecher," I said. "He looked like pictures of the famous Brooklyn clergyman."

"Yes,' returned Hamilton, "my father's mother was one of Henry Ward Beecher's cousins. She was a Beecher. When a little chap Henry Ward Beecher was a bawl baby. His folks were worried about him."

Beecher himself said that as a child he was utterly godless. One day his mother caught him in a raid on the preserves, and promptly shut him up in a dark closet as a punishment. "I went into the closet to repent," he declared, "but unfortunately my mother had left some doughnuts in that closet, and my repentance was postponed."

Charles Hamilton had come to town to attend the community sale, a monthly public auction to which flock all the farmers for miles around. Anything a man may desire to sell may be brought to this venue and disposed of to the highest bidder by the payment of a small fee for the service. On this occasion the live stock and goods displayed were as interesting as an old curiosity shop. A one horse, single seated carriage, which thirty years ago would have cost $100 or more, sold for $22, though the president of the savings bank had predicted that it would bring but $4 or $5.

In a wagon with end gate removed, so that all could see him, lay a long-eared hound of friendly countenance, whose services the owner no longer required. As the auctioneer cried, "How much am I bid for this coon dog?" the old fellow, calmly surveying the crowd, said as distinctly as an animal has ever uttered words, "Take me or leave me—I should worry," the last expression showing that New York slang trickles into far off rural districts. The dog sold for $2.

PIGEONS AND OTHERS

In the nineteenth century, at certain seasons of the year, the skies of this region were blackened with myriads of wild pigeons in their flight across the country. Fifty years ago it was said that the roar of their coming near Oakland, Md., could be heard two miles away. On the ground they were piled from one to two feet deep.

The red squirrel is still one of the tyrants of the woods in the vicinity of New London. Now and then a fox squirrel may be seen gracefully leaping over the ground or from log to log. But both the gray and the black species, once the delight of the rifleman in search of a savory dinner, are now extinct. Though much larger than their red brother they feared him and fled at his approach. An astonishing exhibition of the red squirrel's ferocity took place at the zoological gardens in Cincinnati in 1831. One of the little fellows was thrust into the cage of a rattlesnake to be murdered and swallowed by the writhing monster. Several vicious lunges on the part of the snake having failed to reach their goal, the nimble squirrel at last shot from his perch to the rattlesnake's neck and tore off his head.

Philadelphia Plans New Kind Of Exhibition For '26

(Chung Mei Service)

New York, August 20.—The city of Philadelphia, which in 1876 celebrated the hundredth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence by a "Centennial" exposition, the idea of which has since been repeated many times and in many countries, is now facing a problem which it has in common with any comumnity that wants to stage a great exhibition and recognises that at this late day some new form of enterprise is in order. The problem is created by the need for cooperation at home and abroad in the appropriate observation of a "Sesqui-Centennial," a hundred and fiftieth anniversity to be held in the same city in 1926.

"We have a great national, and international event to commemorate; why not use our opportunity in a new way?" says the Monthly Bulletin of the Corn Exchange National Bank of Philadelphia in the discussion of a problem that is important in the immediate future of this great city.

"The new notes which we can inject into the celebration in 1926 are color, and movement, and pageantry. Instead of buildings, full of raw products and manufactured goods, we need exhibits which will illustrate the civilisation of the world. Instead of an international exposition it could much better be a festival of the nations. Foreign peoples should be asked to contribute something peculiarly indicative of their history and life, and we will find a setting for them, devised by our most capable painters, sculptors, architects, landscape artists, lighting engineers, and other men qualified for the service.

"It is not hard to visualise such a festival. Who of us would not rather have an Oriental bazaar, in an area set aside for its reproduction, than a place filled with coffee and dates? A hundred men making Turkey carpets in native surroundings than the mere carpet itself? A mosque or a temple than a "mata" building," or a "machinery hall?" Why might not France send us an historical and modern working display of her Gobelin industry, rather than the old and well-known Government exhibit of bottled and canned goods, which has served at every exposition for so many years? Why should not Baden, for example, send us a ship with artisans at work on clocks directly out of Triberg, or some other little town in the Black Forest, with the picturesque folk scenes appertaining to that part of the earth's surface Or Japan, a tea house with rickshas, and glimpses of her striking street life? Or Canada, let us say, a contribution illustrative of her northern fur trade, with posts and trappers and animals, as well as the peltry of the Hudson Bay country? Or New Mexico, the Indians and their pottery, such as we see at Albuquerque? Or the northwestern states of Montana and Orgeon, something equally characteristic of their life?

"If we were to have such a 'Sesqui-Centennial' celebration, it would be not very different from a great pageant. Through it would pass the people of many lands in their native dress. It would be an international festival of color and beauty, of life and movement. It would be a motion picture, made real, down whose vistas everyone might pass and feel himself a citizen of the world."

Edward Bok has ben elected President of the Philadelphia Sesqui-Centennial Exhibition Association. As Vice President of the Board of Directors he has offered to pay personally $50,000 for a period of five years to secure a really big man as director general of the fair

Dollar-An-Ounce Silver To Remain

(China Press Service)

Denver, Colo. Sept. 11.—At the present rate of purchases of silver by the United States Government under the authority of the Pittman Act it will take two years more to replace the supply of silver sent to Great Britain during the war, according to an announcement by Director of the Mint Edward N. Scobey here today.

Mr. Scobey said that it looked like dollar silver for two more years. After that no estimate of what silver prices will be can be made, but a number of senators from the silver producing states are already planning to hold a conference to discuss the situation next month.

Gen. Harbord Fears The Plucking Board

(China Press Service)

Washington, Sept. 11.—Major General Harbord, Representative Curry and other members of the House have urged the House to enact immediately legislation which would retain in the service a large number of officers who otherwise would be dropped under the appropriations bill.

General Harbord declared that the morale of the Army was suffering owing to the threatened plucking of so many officers of high standing and efficiency.

Maynard, 'Flying Parson,' Is Killed

Rutland, Vt. Sept. 10.—Lieut. Belvin Maynard, "the flying parson," was killed here today while flying at the Rutland fair.

Lieut. Maynard became famous during the war through the fact that he was one of America's most daring airmen and at the same time an ordained minister of the Gospel. He was one of the first flyers to finish in the first coast-to-coast flight conducted by the American flying service, and flew all over the United States on the Victory Loan Flying Circus tours.
